Purpose and Perspective of the Chapter

Learning about the management and leadership of early childhood programs is important for staff and for current and prospective directors. The role of administrator requires knowledge and skills in early childhood education and development as well as in business practices. With expertise in both areas, whether demonstrated by an individual or by a team, the program is likely to be successful for children, families, staff, and other stakeholders.

An effective director of an early childhood education program is involved in all the jobs that will be described in this text from enrolling children to evaluating staff, from budgeting to taking inventory, and from maintaining a physical plant to bandaging a child's scraped knee. The director's job includes doing or overseeing all aspects of program management and leadership.

To do any one of these tasks, a director must have skills and knowledge; to do all of them requires stamina, understanding, and organization; and to do all of them effectively demands exceptional interpersonal skills as emphasized throughout this text.

Additional Activities and Assignments

1. Video Case: Leadership Practices in Child Development Centers: Watch the video clip available in the eBook, study the artifacts in the case, and reflect on the following questions:
 - a. List the six systems crucial to the success of a child development center that the director must oversee.
 - b. After watching and listening to how Ms. Boucher handled her center, summarize three characteristics of a successful director.
2. Interview a director about their role in developing and implementing curriculum in the early childhood education program.
3. Describe how you would resolve a conflict between two teachers, both of whom want to teach the new toddler class.
4. Find an early childhood education program near your school or in your neighborhood. Make an appointment with the director and interview them about the pros and cons of the job and what it entails to be a director. Write a summary for your class Portfolio.
5. Talk to someone who is currently teaching at an early childhood. What type of training and state certification are they required to have?
