As a type of resource, human capital means the organization's employees are described in terms of their training, experience, judgment, intelligence, relationships, and insight—the employee characteristics that can add economic value to the organization.

24) E

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

In terms of business strategy, an organization can succeed if it has a sustainable competitive advantage (is better than competitors at something and can hold that advantage over a sustained period of time). Human resources that are valuable, rare, inimitable, and hard to replace will give a company such an advantage.

25) D

Human resources can provide companies with a sustainable competitive advantage because human resources are valuable (high-quality employees provide a needed service as they perform many critical functions), rare, inimitable, and irreplaceable. An organization realizes the potential of these human resources through the ways it practices human resource management.

26) A

Human capital means the organization's employees are described in terms of their training, experience, judgment, intelligence, relationships, and insight—the employee characteristics that can add economic value to the organization. In other words, for an organization to succeed at what it does, it needs employees with certain qualities, such as particular kinds of training and experience. This view means employees in today's organizations are not interchangeable, easily replaced parts of a system but the source of the company's success or failure.

27) C

Human resources have no good substitutes. When people are well trained and highly motivated, they learn, develop their abilities, and care about customers. It is difficult to imagine another resource that can match committed and talented employees.

28) B

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

Human capital means the organization's employees are described in terms of their training, experience, judgment, intelligence, relationships, and insight—the employee characteristics that can add economic value to the organization. In other words, for an organization to succeed at what it does, it needs employees with certain qualities, such as particular kinds of training and experience. This view means employees in today's organizations are not interchangeable, easily replaced parts of a system but the source of the company's success or failure. In this case, Motorama decided to invest heavily in training its employees on automotive maintenance and design instead of hiring more employees because employees are the source of the company's success or failure.

29) C

In this case, Parul executes her responsibility of providing business partner services. This involves developing effective HR systems that help the organization meet its goals for attracting, keeping, and developing people with the skills it needs. For the systems to be effective, HR people must understand the business so it can understand what the business needs.

30) B

One way to define the responsibilities of HR departments is to think of HR as a business within the company with three product lines: administrative services and transactions, business partner services, and strategic partner. Being a strategic partner involves contributing to the company's strategy through an understanding of its existing and needed human resources and ways HR practices can give the company a competitive advantage. For strategic ideas to be effective, HR people must understand the business, its industry, and its competitors.

Contributing to a company's strategy through an understanding of its existing and needed human resources are ways HR practices can give the company a competitive advantage. For strategic ideas to be effective, HR people must understand the business, its industry, and its competitors.

32) E

In this case, Kareem is executing the HRM function of compensation and benefits. The responsibilities of the HRM function of compensation and benefits include wage and salary administration, incentive pay, insurance, vacation and leave administration, retirement plans, profit sharing, and stock plans.

33) A

The HR function of employee relations involves taking attitude surveys, managing labor relations, developing employee handbooks and company publications, ensuring labor law compliance, and relocation and outplacement services.

34) B

Dorey is supporting the company strategy by managing change.

35) C

Job analysis is the process of getting detailed information about jobs.

36) A

Job design is the process of defining the way work will be performed and the tasks that a given job requires.

37) B

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition

by Noe CH01

Job analysis is the process of getting detailed information about jobs. Job design is the process of defining the way work will be performed and the tasks that a given job requires. These processes help to group tasks in ways that help the organization to operate efficiently and to obtain people with the right qualifications to do the jobs well.

38) A

With many simple jobs, a company can easily find workers who can quickly be trained to perform the jobs at relatively low pay. However, greater concern for innovation and quality has shifted the trend to the use of more broadly defined jobs.

39) C

Recruitment is the process through which an organization seeks applicants for potential employment. Organizations may use internal or external sources for their recruitment process.

40) B

Selection refers to the process by which an organization attempts to identify applicants with the necessary knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics that will help the organization achieve its goals. An organization makes selection decisions in order to add employees to its workforce, as well as to transfer existing employees to new positions.

41) C

In this scenario, Parker is involved in selecting potential employees for his organization. Selection refers to the process by which an organization attempts to identify applicants with the necessary knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics that will help the organization achieve its goals. An organization makes selection decisions in order to add employees to its workforce, as well as to transfer existing employees to new positions.

42) C

Training is a planned effort to enable employees to learn job-related knowledge, skills, and behavior. For example, many organizations offer safety training to teach employees safe work habits.

43) C

Most organizations provide ways for their employees to broaden or deepen their knowledge, skills, and abilities through training and development. Development involves acquiring knowledge, skills, and behavior that improve employees' ability to meet the challenges of a variety of new or existing jobs, including the client and customer demands of those jobs. Development programs often focus on preparing employees for management responsibility.

44) A

Development involves acquiring knowledge, skills, and behavior that improve employees' ability to meet the challenges of a variety of new or existing jobs, including the client and customer demands of those jobs. Development programs often focus on preparing employees for management responsibility. Likewise, if a company plans to set up teams to manufacture products, it might offer a development program to help employees learn the ins and outs of effective teamwork.

45) A

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

Decisions related to training and development include whether an organization will emphasize enabling employees to perform their current jobs, preparing them for future jobs, or both. The organization may offer programs to a few employees in whom the organization wants to invest, or it may have a philosophy of investing in the training of all its workers. Some organizations, especially large ones, may have extensive formal training programs, including classroom sessions and training programs online.

46) D

The process of ensuring that employees' activities and outputs match an organization's goals is called performance management. The activities of performance management include specifying the tasks and outcomes of a job that contribute to the organization's success. Then various measures are used to compare the employee's performance over some time period with the desired performance.

47) D

BrightLook Financial needs to specifically improve upon the performance management function of HR to resolve the employees' complaints. The process of ensuring that employees' activities and outputs match an organization's goals is called performance management. The activities of performance management include specifying the tasks and outcomes of a job that contribute to the organization's success. Then various measures are used to compare the employee's performance over some time period with the desired performance.

48) A

In this scenario, Shelby is involved in performance management. The process of ensuring that employees' activities and outputs match an organization's goals is called performance management. The activities of performance management include specifying the tasks and outcomes of a job that contribute to the organization's success. The human resource department may be responsible for developing or obtaining questionnaires and other devices for measuring performance.

49) C

The activities of performance management include specifying the tasks and outcomes of a job that contribute to the organization's success. Then various measures are used to compare the employee's performance over some time period with the desired performance.

50) A

Performance measures may emphasize observable behaviors (for example, answering the phone by the second ring), outcomes (number of customer complaints and compliments), or both. When the person evaluating performance is not familiar with the details of the job, outcomes tend to be easier to evaluate than specific behaviors. Jamal should consult with the manager to identify the outcomes that are needed for the department's success.

51) D

The pay and benefits that employees earn play an important role in motivating them. A company that wants to provide an exceptional level of service or be exceptionally innovative might pay significantly more than competitors in order to attract and keep the best employees.

52) B

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition

by Noe CH01

Organizations often depend on human resource professionals to help them maintain positive relations with employees. This function includes preparing and distributing employee handbooks that detail company policies and, in large organizations, company publications such as a monthly newsletter or a website on the organization's intranet.

53) B

In this scenario, Amita's role in the organization is to maintain employee relations. Organizations often depend on human resource professionals to help them maintain positive relations with employees. This function includes preparing and distributing employee handbooks that detail company policies and, in large organizations, company publications such as a monthly newsletter or a website on the organization's intranet.

54) B

Organizations often depend on human resource professionals to help them maintain positive relations with employees. Employees turn to the HR department for answers to questions about benefits and company policy and for communicating grievances. Members of the department should be prepared to address such problems.

55) D

In organizations where employees belong to a union, employee relations entail additional responsibilities. The organization periodically conducts collective bargaining to negotiate an employment contract with union members. The HR department maintains communication with union representatives to ensure that problems are resolved as they arise.

56) A

With a policy in place, a company can handle situations more fairly and objectively than if it addressed such incidents on a case-by-case basis.

57) C

Organizations engage in workforce analytics, which is the use of quantitative tools and scientific methods to analyze data from human resource databases and other sources to make evidence-based decisions that support business goals.

58) B

Employee-related information is not just an administrative responsibility, thanks to computer tools. It also can be the basis for knowledge that gives organizations an edge over their competitors. They may engage in workforce analytics, which is the use of quantitative tools and scientific methods to analyze data from human resource databases and other sources to make evidence-based decisions that support business goals. In this case, as Mieke enforced workforce analytics at Mentor Corp., it helped her spot subordinates who could be made leaders in the future with the data.

59) E

Workforce analytics is the use of quantitative tools and scientific methods to analyze data from human resource databases and other sources to make evidence-based decisions that support business goals. In this scenario, BrightenUp Corp. is using workforce analytics as it arrives at decisions based on accurate findings from analyses using quantitative tools that can help the firm achieve its goals.

60) D

Because economic or competitive conditions can force companies to close facilities and lay off employees, cases dealing with the illegal discharge of employees have increased. The issue of "employment at will"—that is, the principle that an employer may terminate employment at any time without notice—will be debated.

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition

61) C

This responsibility of Green Waste HR department is known as human resource planning. Human resource planning involves identifying the numbers and types of employees an organization will require in order to meet its objectives. Using these estimates, the human resource department helps the organization forecast its needs for hiring, training, and reassigning employees.

62) D

Talent management is a systematic, planned effort to attract, retain, develop, and motivate highly skilled employees and managers. When managers are clear about the kinds of people they will need to achieve an organization's goals, talent management combines recruiting, selection, training, and motivational practices to meet those needs.

63) C

Evidence-based HR refers to demonstrating that human resource practices have a positive influence on the company's profits or key stakeholders (employees, customers, community, shareholders). This practice helps show that the money invested in HR programs is justified and that HRM is contributing to the company's goals and objectives.

64) D

Sustainability is broadly defined as an organization's ability to profit without depleting its resources, including employees, natural resources, and the support of the surrounding community. Sustainability seeks profits in ways that communities, customers, and suppliers will support in the long run.

65) A

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

Sustainability is broadly defined as an organization's ability to profit without depleting its resources, including employees, natural resources, and the support of the surrounding community. Success at sustainability comes from meeting the needs of the organization's stakeholders—all the parties who have an interest in the organization's success.

66) B

Stakeholders of a company are the parties who have an interest in the company's success; typically, they include shareholders, the community, customers, and employees. Success at sustainability comes from meeting the needs of the organization's stakeholders, all the parties who have an interest in the organization's success.

67) A

Stakeholders are all the parties who have an interest in the company's success (typically, shareholders, the community, customers, and employees). In this case, Heidi is a stakeholder because she purchases her equipment from Farm Supply Inc. This means she has an interest in the success of the company.

68) C

Sustainable organizations meet the stakeholders' needs by minimizing their environmental impact, providing high-quality products and services, ensuring workplace safety, offering fair compensation, and delivering an adequate return to investors. In an organization with a sustainable strategy, HR departments focus on employee development and empowerment rather than short-term costs, on long-term planning rather than smooth turnover and outsourcing, and on justice and fairness over short-term profits.

69) B

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

Communication involves the skills needed to exchange information with others inside and outside the organization. Behavior examples include expressing information clearly, providing constructive feedback, and listening effectively.

70) D

Business acumen involves understanding how information can be used to support the organization's strategy. Behaviors include gaining and applying knowledge of business principles and how HR functions relate to business success.

71) B

The Society for Human Resource Management has defined sets of knowledge and skills associated with success, grouping these into nine categories it calls HR success competencies. These fall into four clusters of competencies: technical, interpersonal, business, and leadership.

The Society for Human Resource Management has defined sets of knowledge and skills associated with success, grouping these into nine categories it calls HR success competencies. These fall into four clusters of competencies: technical, interpersonal, business, and leadership. The interpersonal cluster includes relationship management, communication, and global and cultural effectiveness.

73) B

This scenario illustrates Sakura's human resource expertise. This competency essentially involves understanding and carrying out the functions of human resource management. These behaviors involve using HR technology, applying policies and procedures, and keeping up-to-date on HR laws.

74) B

In this case, Cindy is displaying competency associated with relationship management. Relationship management involves handling the personal interactions necessary for providing services and supporting the organization's goals.

75) D

In this scenario, Mona demonstrates competency in leadership and navigation. This area of competency refers to directing the organization's processes and programs. Depending on one's level in the organization, the necessary behaviors would include behaving consistently with the organization's culture, encouraging people to collaborate, or setting a vision for the HR function or entire organization.

76) D

This scenario illustrates Esmée's competency in global and cultural effectiveness. This competency means valuing and considering various people's perspectives. Behaviors include acquiring knowledge of other cultures, resolving conflicts, and supporting inclusiveness so that all can contribute to their fullest.

77) C

This scenario illustrates Dustin's competency in critical evaluation. That competency refers to the interpretation of information needed for making business decisions. Behaviors include gathering relevant data, applying statistical knowledge to understand the data, and finding root causes of problems.

78) A

In this scenario, Maverick exhibits strength in the area of business acumen. Business acumen involves understanding how information can be used to support the organization's strategy. Behaviors include gaining and applying knowledge of business principles and how HR functions relate to business success.

79) E

Supervisors typically have responsibilities related to all the HR functions. Job analysis and design; HR planning; interviewing job candidates and participating in hiring decisions; training employees; conducting performance appraisals and recommending pay increases; and playing a key role in employee relations are some of the ways in which supervisors participate in HR functions.

80) A

In this case, Kai insists that the supervisors of Brazen Inc. handle employee relations because supervisors play a key role in employee relations. They are most often the voice of management for their employees, and represent a company on a day-to-day basis.

81) C

Ethics refers to fundamental principles of right and wrong. Ethical behavior is behavior that is consistent with those principles. In the context of ethical human resource management, HR managers must view employees as having basic rights. Business decisions, including HRM decisions, should be ethical, but the evidence suggests that is not always what happens. As a result, recent surveys indicate that the general public and managers do not have positive perceptions of the ethical conduct of U.S. businesses.

82) A

Fundamentals of Human Resource Management 9th Edition by Noe CH01

In the context of ethical human resource management, HR managers must view employees as having basic rights. Such a view reflects ethical principles embodied in the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights.

83) B

The right of free consent states that people have the right to be treated only as they knowingly and willingly consent to be treated. An example that applies to employees would be that employees should know the nature of the job they are being hired to do; the employer should not deceive them.

84) B

The right of freedom of speech states that people have the right to criticize an organization's ethics if they do so in good conscience and their criticism does not violate the rights of individuals in the organization. Many organizations address this right by offering hotlines or policies and procedures designed to handle complaints from employees.

85) C

According to the right of freedom of conscience, people have the right to refuse to do what violates their moral beliefs, as long as these beliefs reflect commonly accepted norms. A supervisor who demands that an employee do something that is unsafe or environmentally damaging may be violating this right if the task conflicts with the employee's values.

The right of privacy holds that people have the right to do as they wish in their private lives, and they have the right to control what they reveal about private activities.

The right of privacy holds that people have the right to do as they wish in their private lives, and they have the right to control what they reveal about private activities.

89) C

In this case, Nicholas applied his right of freedom of speech. According to the work of philosopher Immanuel Kant, every person has certain basic rights. One of them is right of freedom of speech. According to this right, people have the right to criticize an organization's ethics if they do so in good conscience and their criticism does not violate the rights of individuals in the organization.

Ethical, successful companies act according to four principles. First, in their relationships with customers, vendors, and clients, ethical and successful companies emphasize mutual benefits. Second, employees assume responsibility for the actions of the company. Third, such companies have a sense of purpose or vision that employees value and use in their day-to-day work. Finally, they emphasize fairness; that is, another person's interests count as much as their own.

For human resource practices to be considered ethical, they must satisfy three basic standards. First, HRM practices must result in the greatest good for the largest number of people. Second, employment practices must respect basic human rights of privacy, due process, consent, and free speech. Third, managers must treat employees and customers equitably and fairly.

HR generalists usually perform the full range of HRM activities, including recruiting, training, compensation, and employee relations. The vast majority of HRM professionals have a college degree, and many also have completed postgraduate work. The typical field of study for HR professionals is business.

97) C

The primary professional organization for HRM is the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM). SHRM is the world's largest human resource management association. It provides education and information services, conferences and seminars, government and media representation, and online services and publications.

98) Training is a planned effort to enable employees to learn job-related knowledge, skills, and behavior. 99) Administering pay and benefits is another big responsibility.

Organizations need systems for keeping track of each employee's earnings and benefits. Employees need information about their health plan, retirement plan, and other benefits. Keeping track of this involves extensive record keeping and reporting to management, employees, the government, and others.

100) Stakeholders are all the parties who have an interest in the organization's success. Typically, an organization's stakeholders include shareholders, the community, customers, and employees.

103) Human resources have the following four necessary qualities that help an organization gain a sustainable competitive advantage:

- 1) Human resources are valuable. High-quality employees provide a needed service as they perform many critical functions.
- 2) Human resources are rare. A person with high levels of the needed skills and knowledge is not common.
- 3) Human resources cannot be imitated. To imitate human resources at a high-performing competitor, one would have to first figure out which employees are providing the advantage and how. Then people would need to be recruited who can do precisely the same thing. Finally, systems would have to be set up to enable those people to imitate the competitor.
- 4) Human resources have no good substitutes. When people are well trained and highly motivated, they learn, develop their abilities, and care about customers. It is difficult for another resource to match committed and talented employees.

104) Some of the important HR responsibilities include:

- 1) Analysis and design of work: Work analysis, job design, and job descriptions.
- 2) Recruitment and selection: Recruiting, job postings, interviewing, testing, and coordinating use of temporary labor.
- 3) Training and development: Orientation, skills training, and career development programs.
- 4) Performance management: Performance measures; preparation and administration of performance appraisals; and discipline.
- 5) Compensation and benefits: Wage and salary administration, incentive pay, insurance, vacation leave administration, retirement plans, profit sharing, and stock plans.
- 6) Employee relations: Attitude surveys, labor relations, employee handbooks, company publications, labor law compliance, and relocation and outplacement services.
- 7) Personnel policies: Policy creation and policy communication.
- 8) Employee data and information systems: Record keeping, HR information systems, and workforce analytics.
- 9) Compliance with laws: Policies to ensure lawful behavior, reporting, posting information, safety inspections, and accessibility accommodations.
- 10) Support for strategy: Human resource planning and forecasting, talent management, and change management.

105) Human resource planning involves identifying the numbers and types of employees an organization will require in order to meet its objectives. Using these estimates, the human resource department helps the organization forecast its needs for hiring, training, and reassigning employees. Planning also may show that the organization will need fewer employees to meet anticipated needs. In that situation, human resource planning includes how to handle or avoid layoffs. Human resource planning provides important information for talent management—a systematic, planned effort to attract, retain, develop, and motivate highly skilled employees and managers. When managers are clear about the kinds of people they will need to achieve the organization's goals, talent management combines recruiting, selection, training, and motivational practices to meet those needs. Approaching these tasks in terms of talent management is one way HR managers are making the link to organizational strategy.

Evidence-based HR refers to demonstrating that human resource practices have a positive influence on the company's profits or key stakeholders (employees, customers, community, shareholders). This practice helps show that the money invested in HR programs, such as talent management, is justified and that HRM is contributing to the company's goals and objectives.

106) 1) Human resource expertise essentially involves understanding and carrying out the functions of human resource management.

Behaviors can include the use of HR technology, applying policies and procedures, and keeping up-to-date on HR laws.

2) Relationship management involves handling the personal interactions necessary for providing services and supporting the organization's goals. Behaviors can include treating employees respectfully, building trust, and providing great customer service to those served by HR functions.

3) Consultation refers to the ways HR employees guide others in the organization. This can be done through behaviors such as coaching, gathering data to support business decisions, and especially at a senior level, designing solutions in support of business strategy.

4) Leadership and navigation refer to directing the organization's processes and programs. Depending on one's level in the organization, the necessary behaviors could include behaving consistently with the organization's culture, encouraging people to collaborate, or setting a vision for the HR function or entire organization.

5) Communication involves the skills needed to exchange information with others inside and outside the organization. Behavior examples can include expressing information clearly, providing constructive feedback, and listening effectively.

6) Global and cultural effectiveness means valuing and considering various people's perspectives. Behaviors can include acquiring knowledge of other cultures, resolving conflicts, and supporting inclusiveness so that all can contribute to their fullest.

7) Ethical practice involves applying integrity, accountability, and other core values. Behavior examples can include maintaining confidentiality, rewarding ethical behavior, and responding to reports of unethical conduct.

8) Critical evaluation refers to the interpretation of information needed for making business decisions. Behaviors can include gathering relevant data, applying statistical knowledge to understand the data, and finding root causes of problems.

9) Business acumen involves understanding how information can be used to support the organization's strategy. Behaviors can include gaining and applying knowledge of business principles and how HR functions relate to business success.

107) Although many organizations have human resource departments, HR activities are by no means limited to HR specialists. Non-HR managers need to be familiar with the basics of HRM and their role with regard to managing human resources. In small organizations, there may be an HR specialist, but many HR activities are carried out by line supervisors. Supervisors typically have responsibilities related to all the HR functions. Organizations depend on supervisors to help them determine what kinds of work need to be done (job analysis and design) and in what quantities (HR planning). Supervisors typically interview job candidates and participate in the decisions about which candidates to hire. Many organizations expect supervisors to train employees in some or all aspects of the employees' jobs. Supervisors conduct performance appraisals and may recommend pay increases. Also, supervisors play a key role in employee relations because they are most often the voice of management for their employees, representing the company on a day-to-day basis. In all these activities, supervisors can participate in HRM by taking into consideration the ways that decisions and policies will affect their employees. Understanding the principles of communication, motivation, and other elements of human behavior can help supervisors inspire the best from the organization's human resources.
