Essay (7)

Q96. [Essay]

Compare and contrast start-up organizations, multinational corporations, and growth corporations. How are each related to size (number of employees), revenue, and locations? Are they mutually exclusive?

Suggested answer: Sample response: A start-up organization is any organization that is newly formed. It can be any size, have any range of revenue, and be located in one country or multiple countries. A multinational corporation is any corporation with operations in multiple countries. It can also be of any size, but these companies often have more than 10,000 employees. Revenue is not a determining factor in classifying a company as multinational. A growth company is any company that increases its annual revenue faster than other similar companies or competitors in the same industry. It can be any size and be national or multinational, but it must be experiencing revenue growth as outlined above. A single company can be classified as a start-up, multinational, and growth company.

Q97. [Essay]

Compare and contrast top managers, middle manager, and first-line managers, including defining their relation to one another and the types of decisions they make.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Top managers are the senior-most managers in the organization. They define the goals of the organization and make decisions that affect the entire company. Middle managers report to the upper management and also oversee first-line managers. These managers make departmental-level decisions. First-line managers are responsible for overseeing the employees who produce the goods and services. They make decisions that affect their direct reports and tend to be more short term in focus.

Q98. [Essay]

Define remote work, and explain one advantage and disadvantage of organizations employing it as a work option.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Remote work is a flexible work arrangement in which employees can work from home on a computer or other advanced telecommunications system linked to a primary office. One benefit of organizations using remote work is it increases productivity. Remote workers are more likely to stay focused on tasks at hand and limit distractions, which are common in the workplace. A weakness of utilizing remote work as an option is that it presents challenges for managers. A recent Harvard survey found that 40% of managers needed to prepare to manage remote employees and needed help keeping them engaged, while only 40% of employees felt supported by their managers.

Q99. [Essay]

Define the four major functions of a manager, and explain how they are related to one another.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The four functions of management are planning, organizing, leading, and controlling. During planning, the manager sets goals and creates a strategy for achieving those goals. Once a plan is created, the manager assembles the resources to implement the strategy. This is organizing. After organizing, the manager communicates the plan and needs to the staff and motivates them as needed. Once the staff begins to implement the plan, the manager begins controlling, which involves comparing performance results against the goals and taking corrective action as needed.

Q100. [Essay]

Explain the role of a manager in showing support to employees impacted by mental health conditions.

Suggested answer: Sample response: A positive, inclusive working environment that supports mental health and well-being is essential to the functioning of any organization. As a manager, positively influencing employees' well-being is an integral part of management. Managers can support employees by showing compassion and concern, recognizing when an employee appears overwhelmed, respecting employee privacy, providing them with a safe space to share, and enabling access to programs and resources that support employee well-being.

Q101. [Essay]

Explain what an entrepreneurial mindset is and why managers can benefit from developing this mindset.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Individuals with an entrepreneurial mindset can quickly sense opportunities, act, and get organized under uncertain conditions. These qualities are critical for managers, who must capture and create opportunities by adapting capabilities to compete effectively, motivate others to work toward a common goal to reduce uncertainty, and take ownership of unknown outcomes for a new project. Managers who develop an entrepreneurial mindset can benefit by learning powerful lessons from entrepreneurs and enhance the value of all types of organizations by creating opportunities, generating ideas, and devising strategies toward positive change. This is what being a manager with an entrepreneurial mindset is all about.

Q102. [Essay]

How can a manager use the company's mission, vision, and core values to make business decisions?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The mission, vision, and core values define what is important to the organization: why they exist, what their future goals are, and in what manner they seek to achieve their goals. When considering new business opportunities, managers can review the opportunity to see if it aligns with the goals of the mission, vision, and values. If it does, the company may decide to pursue the opportunity. If it doesn't, the company may decide not to pursue it.

Q137. [Essay]

Compare and contrast the two types of soldiering.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Soldiering is the process of appearing efficient while actually working slower. This can be done subconsciously or on purpose. Natural soldiering involves employees who just gradually take it easy and perform with less of an urgency. Systemic soldiering has a different motivator. Systemic soldiering involves deliberately choosing to lower one's own performance standards. Natural soldiering is easier to correct, as motivational programs are usually effective.

Q138. [Essay]

Contrast a Theory X manager and a Theory Y manager.

Suggested answer: Sample response: A manager that supports Theory X would have little to no faith in their employees. This type of manager assumes that employees do not have a strong work ethic and will not work in the absence of discipline. As a result, this will be an intimidating and coercive manager. A manager who supports Theory Y, however, will have a positive view of their employees and assume that they enjoy the challenges of their positions. This type of manager will be motivating and committed in nature.

Q139. [Essay]

Describe a contribution of Henry Ford to the field of management.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Henry Ford wanted to create a quality automobile that middle-class people could afford. He contributed to the field in terms of the importance of consistent quality of products and meeting the demands of consumers. He also created the assembly line as a means of improving production quality and quantity. Employees had specialized roles and each added to the finished product.

Q140. [Essay]

How did Charles Babbage contribute to the development of management theories and principles?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Charles Babbage observed workers in factories and noticed that they could become more efficient. He addressed this concern by documenting that routine and monotonous tasks led to the boredom of workers, and bored workers were much less efficient. With less motivation, employees were more likely to soldier. Babbage conducted time studies to quantitatively measure how long it took for certain actions to take place. Through time studies, he could measure improvements in speed.

Q141. [Essay]

How did Socrates, Aristotle, and Plutarch contribute to the historical foundations of management?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The first management theories can be traced back to ancient Greek philosophers Socrates, Aristotle, and Plutarch, each of whom influenced Western thought considerably. Socrates explored our right to think for ourselves rather than unthinkingly following others, Aristotle encouraged self-fulfillment, and Plutarch introduced the idea of role models.

Q142. [Essay]

How were Chester Barnard's principles new and unique?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Barnard contributed his unique beliefs on equilibrium and the power of both internal and external influences. He also emphasized cooperation, modifying behaviors, and working toward the greater good. Unlike so many others, Barnard stated that instead of managers giving authority to employees, employees are giving authority to managers.

Q143. [Essay]

What is the most important impact of the relay-assembly test room study?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The most important contribution from the relay-assembly test room study was very unexpected. As researchers changed the number of breaks and different variables, the performance continued to improve. It was learned that performance increased depending on realized changes, and it didn't matter which change had occurred. When employees knew they were experiencing a new condition of some type, their work performance improved.

Q180. [Essay]

Explain the distinction between artificial intelligence and machine learning. Provide examples of the function of each.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Artificial intelligence is the ability of a machine to imitate tasks associated with intelligent human behavior. For instance, Google Maps and ride-sharing apps like Lyft and Uber all use AI to tackle complex navigations. On the other hand, machine learning is a branch of AI; it is the science of getting computers to act autonomously while learning and improving with every experience. For example, self-driving cars are a result of machine learning.

Q181. [Essay]

Think of a job you have had in the past or your role as a student. Describe how you used conceptual, technical, and relational skills to aid in your success.

Suggested answer: Sample response: I used to work as a cashier in retail at a department store in the mall. This job requires the technical skills of using the cash register, processing credit/debit card payments, making change, and refilling the paper for the receipts. This job also requires communication skills and interactions with customer, which are relational skills. The job may also often required conceptual skills if a problem occurred, such as a technology failure or unruly customer.

Q182. [Essay]

Yvette is a customer service manager for a nationwide lawn care company. In evaluating customer feedback, she sees that her team has scored low on these areas: responds to inquiries promptly and arrives on time. The team scores high in these areas: yard treatment is effective, technician performs all requested tasks, and technician leaves the yard in good condition. Evaluate this scenario in terms of effectiveness and efficiency.

Suggested answer: Sample response: This team is effective in that the technicians perform the right tasks. That is, they are doing the right things to fulfill the tasks and services they are being paid to do. However, the team seems to be inefficient. This is seen in the feedback that they are often late to appointments and are slow to respond to customer queries.

Q197. [Essay]

Describe an experience when you have witnessed or participated in a struggle for victory.

Suggested answer: Sample response: In my role work in the student resources office on campus, I worked on a team with two very passionate members. Each one was very aggressive when they believed in something, so they would often engage in conflict. It felt like every time there was a major decision, they would disagree. In these situations, they would struggle by arguing back and forth until finally, one of them would win the argument and experience victory.

Q198. [Essay]

Describe an experience when you have witnessed or participated in group submission.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Once, in an assigned group in an English class, one member dominated from the very beginning. The dominant member always wanted to have everything their way. The rest of the group members just went along with it and agreed on the person's suggestions for the direction of the team to avoid conflict. It was easier to just let the person win and guide our team the way they saw fit rather than argue.

Q199. [Essay]

What is management science? How could this be applied to a work role you currently have or in your role as a student?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Management science uses numbers and statistics to measure performance. In my current role as a restaurant server, I can track my own progress in terms of guests served, average sales, or gratuity earned. As a student, I can constantly track my own attendance figures as well as my exam scores and assignment grades. Quantitative data use numbers and comparison for tracking progress and encouraging measurable success. These figures can also be compared over time periods, such as business quarters, semesters, or years.
