Learning Objectives

LO1-1 Define the role of marketing.

According to the American Marketing Association, formally, marketing is the “activity, set of institutions, and processes for creating, capturing, communicating, delivering, and exchanging offerings that have value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large.” But marketing has a prominent role in every person’s daily life, whether they are exchanging money for conventional products, exchanging personal information for services, or exchanging time for a cause that gives them a good feeling. It includes a vast range of stakeholders, including not just the firm and the customer but also other members of the supply chain, communities, and society as a whole. Furthermore, the foundation of all marketing can be summarized in the four Ps, such that marketing defines the product, price, place, and promotion that firms use to get their offerings into consumers’ hands.

LO1-2 Detail the evolution of marketing over time.

Marketing has evolved from a production or sales-oriented approach, in which firms told people what they could and should buy, to a market- and value- oriented perspective. In this more recent view, firms look to their markets to tell them what they need to product and provide, in a way that creates value for them and their customers.

LO1-3 Describe how marketers create value for a product or service.

Value stems from at least four main activities that value-driven marketers undertake and are reinforced throughout the book:

- Adding value, such that they leverage various elements of marketing and work to build relationships with partners and customers to ensure that they introduce their product, service, or idea to the marketplace at just the place and time that customers want it.
- Marketing analytics, which companies use to gather vast amounts of information about customers and competitors, then analyze it and share it across their own organization and with partner firms.
- Social and mobile marketing, to take advantage of new technologies and connect with customers using the latest social media channels.
- Ethical and societal dilemmas, such that firms engage in conscious marketing that takes into account the benefits and costs of their actions for all stakeholders.

Answers to End of Chapter Learning Aids

Marketing Digitally

1. Visit the website (<https://openai.com/chatgpt>) and try ChatGPT. What value does ChatGPT provide marketers?

Student responses will vary, and most students will input the question into ChatGPT. The following is an example of a possible set of answers. ChatGPT can provide significant value to marketers in several ways: content generation, copywriting, brainstorming and idea generation, audience engagement, market research, content curation, language translation, a/b testing ideas, SEO optimization, social media engagement, personalization, and learning and education. It's important to note that while ChatGPT can be a valuable tool for marketers, it's not a replacement for human creativity, strategic thinking, and domain expertise. It should be used as a supplement to enhance marketing efforts and streamline various tasks.

2. Go to Instagram.com and navigate to the “About Us” section. What is Instagram’s mission? How could a marketer use Instagram, and what other social media tools could they use? What are the drawbacks a marketer might face when using Instagram to communicate with their customers?

Mission: Instagram's mission is to bring you closer to the people and things you love..

Marketers can use Instagram by encouraging users to incorporate #tags into their postings to promote the company. For marketers with a budget, Instagram offers filters to reach to promote the location where the picture was taken. It also offers the Instagram logo and other assets for use on websites, in-store windows, or other marketing materials. Facebook and TikTok are other social media platforms that can be used. One drawback a marketer might face when using Instagram to communicate with their customers is that they have no control over the types of pictures the user might take and the images they might portray.

3. Visit the site of any company from which. You receive some free service (e.g. Facebook, Spotify, TikTok, X (formerly Twitter), Gmail). Check your settings to see what information to have given to the company to exchange for the service. Is the value of the information you have provided equivalent to the value the company provides you with its service?

Students' answers will vary greatly depending on the service they visit and the privacy settings they have. Many people set up these services without really checking what information they don't have to share and what they do, blindly setting up these services without investigating the restrictions they can choose in the privacy settings. The less likely they are to use the privacy settings, the less likely students will believe that the exchange is worth it. Another factor that comes into play is that many times, students lack the life experience to realize the negative ramifications that can come with sharing too much information so they may not realize how much they are giving away.

Marketing Applications

- 1. Do you know the difference between needs and wants? When companies that sell coffee develop their marketing strategy, do they concentrate on satisfying their customers' needs or wants? What about a utility company, such as the local power company or a humanitarian agency, such as Doctors without Borders?

Needs are essential items that individuals cannot live without. These include necessities like shelter, health care, basic food, and basic transportation. Wants are products that customers would like to have and view as improving their quality of life, like brand-name clothing, computers, and luxury vehicles.

This question is intended to make students think about the difference between customer needs and wants, as well as how companies might address one or both. It also challenges students to explore whether different types of companies address the needs and wants of consumers differently. Companies that sell coffee most likely concentrate on satisfying customers' wants, as their products are not considered essential items. Firms also must respond to competitors' offers. An electric utility company might have a strong imperative to satisfy customers' needs for reliable electricity but not focus as much on the customer's wants because it faces little market competition. Student responses should reflect an awareness of considering both consumers' wants and needs. Humanitarian agencies, like Doctors without Borders, are satisfying customers' needs, especially their basic needs for health care and medicine.

- 2. People can apply marketing principles to finding a job. If the person looking for a job is the product, describe the other three Ps.

Students should define the remaining Ps in the marketing mix and better define the product P. In addition, answers should consider how a person seeking employment can offer value to a potential employer and how employers might add value to prospective employees. Responses should answer the following questions.

What employer needs and wants can the applicant offer to fulfill (product)?

What will it cost the potential employer to hire the applicant (price)?

How will the employer promote the job to the pool of possible applicants (promotion)?

Where and when will the job be available (place)?

- 3. What is the difference between a good and a service? When you buy a music subscription on Spotify, are you buying a good or service? Would your answer be different if you bought an MP3 album on Amazon?

Goods are items that you can physically touch, whereas services are intangible customer benefits that are produced by people or machines and cannot be separated from the producer.

Students should understand that in terms of the creation of each, they are both "created" using raw materials that are "processed" into a finished output.

- 4. One of your friends was recently watching TV and saw an advertisement that they liked. They said, "Wow that was great marketing!" Was the ad, in fact, marketing?

Students frequently associate advertising with marketing but fail to recognize that advertising is just one part of all the functions encompassed by marketing. Student responses should acknowledge that marketing is made up of product, price, place, and promotion decisions, and advertising is one of the promotional tools available to marketers.

- 5. Which of the four Ps is most relevant for understanding how Google Maps creates value for customers and for firms?

In the context of Google Maps, the most relevant "P" for understanding how it creates value for customers and firms would likely be "Product." It offers a wide range of features and benefits to both customers and firms. For customers, Google Maps provides accurate and up-to-date mapping information, turn-by-turn navigation, real-time traffic data, Street View, and more. These features contribute to the convenience, efficiency, and overall experience of users when navigating or exploring locations. For firms, Google Maps provides a platform to list and showcase their businesses, which increases their visibility and accessibility to potential customers.

While the other Ps (Price, Place, and Promotion) are still relevant to Google Maps, they might not be as central to its value creation. Google Maps is generally provided for free to users (Price). Google Maps is a digital platform accessible through various devices connected to the internet (Place). Finally, it benefits from promotion through Google's broader marketing efforts, and it's arguably not as critical as the product itself in terms of value creation.

6. Explain how Wrangler Jeans priced at $29 versus Dolce and Gabbana Jeans at $10,200 deliver value to their respective target markets. What factors drive these vastly different prices?

Both Wrangler and Dolce and Gabbana jeans meet the basic need of providing clothing functionality to consumers. Both are comfortable, durable, and provide protection against the environment. Wrangler has a mass distribution channel strategy and a low price point that allows multiple segments of consumers to be able to afford and use this product. Wrangler jeans are often associated with high-quality denim and construction. They have a reputation for being durable and able to withstand wear and tear, making them popular for rugged outdoor activities.

Dolce & Gabbana is known for its luxurious and elegant designs. The brand often incorporates intricate details, high-quality materials, and craftsmanship into its products, which appeals to consumers seeking high-end fashion. The brand has been known for its innovative and unique designs that combine traditional elements with modern aesthetics, setting trends in the fashion world. Also, many celebrities, actors, musicians, and public figures have been seen wearing Dolce & Gabbana, which contributes to the brand's popularity and reputation.

7. Assume you have been hired into the marketing department of a major consumer products manufacturer such as Nike. You are having lunch with some new colleagues in other departments—finance, manufacturing, and logistics. They are arguing that the company could save millions of dollars if it just got rid of the marketing department. Develop an argument that would persuade them otherwise.

This scenario forces students to think about the purpose and value of marketing in an organizational context and allows for a variety of justifications. For example, a student could use an internal or external perspective and argue that finance, manufacturing, and logistics tend to worry less about the customer and more about internal processes, whereas the marketing and sales functions constantly focus outward on the customers the company serves. Using this argument, the student might question whether other departments are willing or prepared to take on customer relations and develop an understanding of how and why customers buy the company's product or service. Another argument might simply question how customers will even know about the company's products if the marketing department doesn't broadcast their features, benefits, and value outward.

8. Why do marketers like those at Apple find it important to embrace societal needs and ethical business practices? Provide an example of a societal need or ethical business practice that Apple is addressing.

This question centers on the role of social and ethical issues in a marketing context. Students might mention efforts such as keeping the environment clean and offering fair wages to workers. For example, Apple has developed multiple green initiatives. Some examples:

- The Apple Supplier Code of Conduct
 - Our Supplier Code of Conduct outlines our high standards for creating safer working conditions, treating workers fairly, and using environmentally responsible practices. It's one of the strictest in our industry and often requires practices above and beyond local law. To comply with the Code of Conduct, all suppliers must meet the stringent requirements in our Supplier Responsibility Standards.
- Clean Energy Program
 - In 2015, we launched our Clean Energy Program to reduce carbon emissions across our supply chain, which makes up nearly three-quarters of Apple's total carbon footprint. In China alone, we're working with our suppliers to install more than 2 gigawatts of clean energy.

Chapter Case Study: ChatGPT: Revolutionizing Marketing with Cutting-Edge Natural Language Processing

1. What is ChatGPT?

ChatGPT is a large language model developed by OpenAI, which is capable of processing and generating natural language text. It is based on a deep neural network architecture and has been trained on a massive data set of text using unsupervised learning techniques, making it a powerful tool for natural language processing tasks.

2. How can companies use ChatGPT, and other generative AI, for marketing?

Student answers will vary. The case states that ChatGPT can be an invaluable tool for companies looking to enhance their marketing efforts. Marketers can use ChatGPT to power chatbots and virtual assistants, providing customers with personalized and interactive engagement. Chatbots can be integrated into websites, social media channels, or messaging apps and can answer questions, provide recommendations, and offer support. ChatGPT can also be used to generate high-quality content, such as product descriptions, social media posts, and marketing e-mails, saving time and resources.

Additionally, marketers can use ChatGPT to conduct customer research and gain insights into their preferences and behaviors. ChatGPT can also analyze customer data and provide personalized recommendations for products, services, and content, helping marketers create targeted campaigns that resonate with their audience. Finally, ChatGPT can be used to provide automated customer service, reducing the workload on customer service teams, and providing faster, more consistent support to customers.

3. What are the benefits of using generative AI?

Student answers will vary. Generative AI has the potential to revolutionize various aspects of marketing by enabling the creation of content, strategies, and insights that were previously time-consuming or even impossible to achieve. By leveraging the power of natural language processing, marketers can create more personalized and effective marketing campaigns that drive results. Chatbots can ask customers questions and provide feedback, allowing marketers to collect data in a conversational and engaging way.

4. What concerns does using ChatGPT and other generative AI raise?

Student answers will vary. The use of generative AI, including systems like ChatGPT, raises several important concerns that need to be addressed to ensure ethical and responsible deployment. Some of these concerns include the following. Generative AI models can learn biases present in the training data, potentially leading to the generation of biased or discriminatory content. There is a risk that generative AI can be used to create fake news, deceptive content, and misinformation. AI systems might inadvertently generate content that includes private or sensitive information, violating individuals' privacy rights.

Generative AI can be used to create content that is designed to manipulate or exploit users' emotions and behaviors for commercial or political purposes. In fields where generative AI is applied, like marketing, there is a concern about potential job displacement as tasks traditionally done by humans are automated. Also, even well-intentioned AI-generated content can sometimes have unintended negative consequences, leading to misunderstandings or misinformation.

Additional Teaching Tips

In this chapter, the goal is to provide an overview of marketing and encourage students to think about the specific aspects of the marketing mix.

Place is one of the most difficult concepts for students because it is largely invisible to them as consumers. They touch hard goods, experience services, view and hear promotions, and pay for what they buy, but it can seem that products almost appear magically. One recent trend among environmentally conscious consumers is to seek out products produced within a 100-mile radius of their hometowns. Buying these products reduces costs and detrimental environmental effects by reducing emissions associated with transportation and storage. Students should visit local grocery markets, identify goods, and investigate how far the products traveled (and by what means) to reach the store's shelves. From this experience, a rich discussion of both distribution decisions and marketing's impact on society can evolve.

To make the eras of marketing clear to students, divide the class into groups, with each group assigned to a specific era. Ask the students to identify a business that adheres to their assigned era in terms of its business philosophy and approach. They should present the business to the class with evidence of the business's philosophy. Each brief presentation should include an assessment of whether the orientation is appropriate to the business given its competitive environment, target audience, and positioning strategy, and if not, what orientation would be best.

ZipCar: Creating Value in the Marketplace

- Activity Type: Case Analysis
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02, 01-03
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: This case describes Zipcar's operations, focusing on how it creates value. Students answer questions relating the case to chapter concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: Nearly a decade ago, the founders of Zipcar decided to bring the car-sharing experience to the United States. Since then, Zipcar has developed the gold standard by offering its members 24/7 access to thousands of cars around the world and creating a revolution in the way many think about alternate transportation.

This activity is important because understanding the marketplace, especially consumers' needs and wants, is fundamental to marketing success.

The goal of this activity is to demonstrate how marketing focuses on creating value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large.

- Concept Review: Understanding the marketplace, and especially consumers' needs and wants, is fundamental to marketing success. Marketing focuses on creating value for customers, clients, partners, and society at large.

Follow-up Activity

Zipcar has a special program targeted at universities. Ask the students the following questions:

- How might students' wants and needs differ from those of Zipcar customers in general?
- What kind of marketing (B2C, B2B, C2C) is Zipcar engaging in when it works with universities to get Zipcar locations approved on campus?
- How can Zipcar create value for university administrators such that they would be interested in having Zipcar locations on campus?

After discussing these points, visit the Zipcar website and look at the "Zipcar for universities" tab. Note the three columns addressing how Zipcar creates value for three different audiences: alumni, students, and faculty and staff.

The Marketing Mix: Travel Goods and Services

- Activity Type: Multiple Choice
- Learning Objectives: 01-01
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: The student is presented with eight marketing activities performed by two travel companies—one that manufactures products and one that offers services. Students are asked to classify the activities according to the marketing mix element it represents.

Activity

- Introduction: Marketing traditionally has been divided into a set of four interrelated decisions known as the marketing mix, or four Ps: product, price, place, and promotion. Two travel-oriented companies—one a producer of goods, the other a service provider—have different marketing mixes. In this activity, you categorize a set of statements about each company's marketing activities according to the four Ps (product, price, place, and promotion). This activity is important because one of the core aspects of marketing is to create value for customers.

The goal of this activity is to recognize that companies make different marketing mix decisions to offer value. In this activity, you will categorize a set of statements about each company's marketing activities according to the four Ps (product, price, place, and promotion).

Follow-Up Activity

- In small groups, students select a company/brand from which they buy products or services. Then, have them fill in examples of marketing activities that fit into each of the four Ps.

Jeans

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: This video case discusses the market for blue jeans, with its wide price range and many different sets of customer needs and wants. After the video ends, students are asked questions about the video and related course concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: Marketing involves satisfying the needs and wants of consumers. However, not all consumers have the same needs and wants. The marketing of blue jeans is a good example of how marketers develop a different marketing mix to suit the needs of different consumers.
- Concept Review: First invented in the United States, blue jeans represent everything American. How blue jeans went from their humble beginnings to the height of high fashion is a marketing success story. There are dozens of brands, ranging from the $10 pair to the $1,000 pair, with numerous offerings between the two extremes to meet the needs of every type of consumer. Marketers must understand what consumers value in order to manage the marketing mix to deliver the right set of benefits to different consumers.
- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activity

In groups or individually, ask students to:

1. List all the brands of jeans they can think of, from basic discount brands to hip designer brands.
2. Use the Internet to find typical prices for a pair of jeans in each brand.
3. Enter the prices into a spreadsheet and generate a scattergram of the prices. (You can use options to have each point labeled by its brand name.)

Then, discuss: How could this scattergram be useful to marketers of each brand? Possible answers:

- It shows the overall price range so a brand can tell if its price is unusually high or low.
- It MIGHT indicate which brands are competing head-to-head (the ones whose dots on the scattergram are closest together), though it's important to note that pricing is only one dimension on which brands can be similar or different. They may be targeting different age or size ranges or aiming to establish different brand images.

Value: The Bottled Water Industry

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: This video case traces the evolution of the bottled water industry. After the video ends, students are asked questions about the video and related course concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: Bottled water companies create value for customers even though they sell a natural resource that is free and abundant. Water was first positioned as a premium product that indicated status and sophistication. Since then, soft drink companies with large distribution networks, such as PepsiCo and Coca-Cola, have marketed bottled water at lower prices. This activity is important because all marketers must consistently find ways to integrate their different functions into customer value.
- Concept Review: The American Marketing Association states that marketing is “an organizational function and a set of processes for creating, communicating, and delivering value to customers and for managing customer relationships in ways that benefit the organization and its stakeholders.” The goal of this activity is to demonstrate your understanding that marketing is a multifaceted function. Although marketing is a multi-faceted function, its fundamental purpose is to create value by developing a variety of offerings, including goods, services, and ideas, to satisfy customer needs.
- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activities

Delivering Value at Red Mango

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: This video reviews Red Mango's marketing mix and its approaches to value creation. After the video ends, students are asked questions about the video and related course concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: Founder Dan Kim opened the first U.S.-based Red Mango in Los Angeles in 2007. He quickly expanded, and there are currently more than 200 locations in 27 states, plus three locations outside the U.S. Red Mango has successfully combined a healthy product (frozen yogurt) with cool, fun shops to hang out in. Red Mango uses 100% all-natural, nonfat or low-fat, kosher, and gluten-free frozen yogurt fortified with probiotics. It has expanded its menu to include fresh fruit smoothies, parfaits, and probiotic iced teas. Red Mango was named the number one smoothie and frozen yogurt chain in America in Zagat's 2011 National Chain Restaurants Survey. This video illustrates how Red Mango delivers superior value to customers.
- Concept Review: This activity is important because you must understand that marketing strives to create value in many ways. If marketers are to succeed, their customers must believe that the firm's products and services are valuable; that is, they are worth more than they cost. Value represents the relationship of benefits to costs. Marketers deliver value through the marketing mix—the 4 Ps: product, price, place, and promotion. Firms become value-driven by sharing information, balancing customer benefits and costs, concentrating on building long-term relations with loyal customers, and creating connections with customers by using social and mobile media. To achieve this, marketers must understand customers' needs and wants. The goal of this activity is to demonstrate your awareness that successful marketing also requires thoughtful planning, with an emphasis on the ethical implications of any of those decisions on society in general.
- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Dunkin' Donuts: Delivering on the Brand Promise

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02
- Difficulty: Medium
- Activity Summary: This video case discusses the overall strategy Dunkin' Donuts uses to build its brand and create value for customers. After the video ends, students are asked questions about the video and related course concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: For more than sixty years, Dunkin' Donuts has been known for its donuts, but recently, the company has increased its focus on coffee, responding to the growing popularity of coffee in the United States. This activity is important because it shows how Dunkin' Donuts uses the four Ps to help differentiate its coffee brand from that of its many competitors.

The goal of this activity is for you to gain a better understanding of how firms develop strategies based on the four Ps.

- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activity

- Discuss how Dunkin' Donuts uses its strategy to differentiate itself from its major competitors in the Coffee and Breakfast marketplace. Some points to consider:
 - Dunkin' Donuts focuses on good value at a reasonable price, mixing coffee and food.
 - Starbucks focuses more on quality to justify its high price and has a stronger focus on coffee drinks, with food available but not a primary focus.
 - McDonald's offers food at all times of the day in addition to its McCafé offerings. It has thousands of locations and keeps a strong focus on low prices and fast service.

From Beans to Pralines: The Global Chocolate Market

- Activity Type: Case Analysis
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02, 01-03
- Difficulty: Easy/Medium/Hard
- Activity Summary: Students read a case reviewing strategies adopted by different chocolate brands and then answer questions requiring them to apply the six core aspects of marketing to what they have read.

Activity

- Introduction: The worldwide chocolate market is huge, with cocoa bean growers spanning three continents, processors located all over the world, and multiple chocolate brands serving the preferences of different consumers. This activity is important because it gives you a solid "big picture" view of the scope of marketing via the chocolate industry.

The goal of this activity is to test your understanding of the six core aspects of marketing by applying these concepts to the global chocolate market.

Follow-Up Activity

- Students might enjoy learning about Dr. Dan Ariely's "Hershey Kiss Experiment," in which students were offered a Lindt truffle or a Hershey kiss. When the truffle cost 26 cents, and the kiss cost 1 cent, equal numbers of students chose each; when the truffle cost 25 cents, and the kiss was free, the vast majority chose the kiss. It illustrates the power of "FREE!" and is discussed further in this article: <https://danariely.com/the-nuances-of-the-free-experiment>.

Making a Market: Vosges Haut-Chocolat

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-03
- Difficulty: Easy/Medium
- Activity Summary: This video case presents a marketing mix for a small brand that seeks to differentiate itself through luxury and innovation. After the video ends, students are asked questions about the video and related course concepts.

Activity

- Introduction: Vosges Haut-Chocolat is a chocolate brand seeking to make consumption of their chocolate a luxury experience, which has grown along with the market for high-end chocolate. The video discusses how Vosges has created a cohesive marketing strategy focused on luxury and innovation.

This activity is important because successful marketing requires an understanding of the full range of marketing activities and the importance of ensuring that all these activities serve a common strategy.

The goal of this activity is to test your understanding of the basic concepts of marketing.

- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activity

- Compare Vosges to Godiva, which is probably the best-known luxury chocolate brand in the USA. What advantages does Godiva have over Vosges? How can Vosges compete successfully with Godiva (both in terms of its current activities and other things it might do)? Points to consider:
 - Godiva has far more brand recognition, more of its own stores, and a wider distribution network.
 - Vosges has innovative flavors; in addition, the very fact that it is not as well-known might allow the brand to create a more exclusive, super-premium image.

iSeelt: Value Creation Through the Marketing Mix

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01
- Difficulty: Easy
- Activity Summary: The iSeelt video cases available for most chapters introduce key concepts through examples that are familiar to students from their own lives. This short activity uses different consumer preferences for coffee shops to illustrate how marketing creates value.

Activity

- Introduction: Value is when a customer receives more than they give up, such as when a customer pays for a product or service. The definition of value often shifts based on what each customer is looking for in the product or service they are purchasing. Take, for instance, the Hernandez family and their search for the perfect cup of coffee. Mom, Dad, and Gabby each place value on different aspects of the coffee-drinking experience. Gabby looks for a unique experience, often provided by independent coffee shops, and is willing to pay more for that experience. Mom, on the other hand, wants the consistency and convenience provided by chains, while Dad is not interested in anything fancy but is simply looking for a cheap cup of coffee. Before organizations can effectively market their coffee to this family with such diverse needs, they need to understand where each consumer places value and meet their needs using the marketing mix.

Customer value is the unique combination of benefits received by targeted buyers that includes quality, convenience, on-time delivery, and both before-sale and after-sale service at a specific price. For organizations to provide value and effectively satisfy consumer needs, they must understand their target market and adjust the marketing mix accordingly.

- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activity

- Discuss some of the places around your university where people can go for a cup of coffee. How do they differ in the value they offer?

Marketing at The Gluten Free Bar (GFB)

- Activity Type: Video Case
- Learning Objectives: 01-01, 01-02, 01-03
- Difficulty: Easy/Medium
- Activity Summary: Students watch a video that addresses how the marketplace is divided into groups of potential customers who are important to Gluten Free Bar (GFB) for different reasons.

Activity

- Introduction: From the beginning of the morning until the late hours of the evening, marketing is a core part of everyone's life. This activity is important because understanding the needs and wants of consumers is essential to marketing success. The marketplace can be segmented or divided into groups of potential customers who are important to an organization for different reasons. These future buyers, along with the companies as sellers, trade things of value so that each is better off as a result.

The goal of this activity is to demonstrate your understanding of the role of marketing in organizations.

- Video: The video is presented to the student below the introductory information. The video plays embedded on the page, after which questions are presented.

Follow-Up Activity

- Discuss the criteria for segmenting a market. Depending on the size of the city or town in which your school is located, have students think of products that can successfully be marketed in your location and others that might not. If the city is large, consider products that succeed there but might not in a smaller town. If the school is in a small college town, consider products that are available in larger areas but not yours. Lead the students in a discussion of why those products can succeed or why they can't, based on the criteria required for segmenting a market.

A Flood of Water Consumption Choices

- Activity Type: Case Analysis
- Learning Objectives: 01-01
- Difficulty: Easy/Medium/Hard

- Activity Summary: Students read a case about how the consumption of water has changed and then answer questions about the case.

Activity

- Introduction: This activity is important because organizations must understand how the role of marketing fits with customers and companies. Understanding the marketplace, and especially consumer needs and wants, is fundamental to marketing success. Good marketing needs to be planned with a recognition of how the implications of those decisions affect society. Marketing traditionally has been divided into a set of four interrelated controllable decisions and consequent actions known as the marketing mix, or four Ps: product, price, place, and promotion. Ultimately, marketing involves an exchange in which both parties should be satisfied after the transaction.

The goal of this activity is to demonstrate your understanding of the role that marketing plays in creating value and why it is important.
