nonprofit sector services, public sector services, suppliers (transportation, accommodations, food and beverage services, attractions, and events and conferences), intermediaries and the customers (tourists/travelers) themselves. The marketing environment is made up of a microenvironment and a macroenvironment. The microenvironment consists of forces close to the organization that can affect its ability to serve its customers: the organization itself, marketing channel firms, customer markets and a broad range of stakeholders or publics. The macroenvironment forces are competitive, demographic, economic, environmental and natural, technological, political, cultural and social, and legal. Marketing is a subject of vital concern in tourism because it is the principal management influence that can be brought to bear on the size and behaviour of this major global market.
