Essay (10)

Q41. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

What is the difference between relationship selling and transaction selling?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. The process by which a firm builds long-term relationships with customers for the purpose of creating mutual competitive advantages is called relationship marketing, or relationship selling. Relationship selling is distinct from the traditional transaction selling, whereby salespeople focus on the immediate one-time sale of the product.

Q42. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Application

Give an example of a sales position that would be at the low, mid, and high levels.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. A low-level sales position would be an account executive. A mid-level sales position would be a national sales manager. A high-level sales person would be a CEO.

Q43. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

What skills do most effective sales managers possess?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. The most effective sales managers possessed these skills: ? Communication skills that include listening, dialogue, and understanding. ? Knowledge (industry and business-related)? Interpersonal skills to relate better with the sales team (i.e., rapport and candor).

Q44. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

What areas do sales professionals need to develop greater expertise as we move into the future?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. Specifically, sales professionals must develop greater expertise in the following areas: hiring after the great resignation; selling by, and to, executives; technological advancement: customer relationship management (CRM) and sales force automation (SFA); sales force diversity; complex channels of distribution; changing international landscape; ethical behavior and social responsibility.

Q45. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

How has selling been important to the U.S. economy?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. First, just look at the number of sales jobs. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, there are about 14 million sales jobs in the United States--and sales jobs are predicted to experience substantial growth over the next decade. Second, the United States and global economy have entered a period of inflation and supply chain constraints. This means that the cost of goods and services are far outpacing what is normally expected and that it is becoming increasingly difficult to source raw materials.

Q46. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Explain how sales jobs differ from other jobs.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. Let's take a closer look at some of the key differentiating features of a sales job: ? The sales force is largely responsible for implementing a firm's marketing strategies in the field. ? Salespeople are among the few employees authorized to spend company funds. ? Salespeople represent their company to customers and to society in general. ? Salespeople represent the customer to their companies. ? Sales reps operate with little or no direct supervision and require a high degree of motivation. ? Salespeople frequently face rejection. ? Salespeople need more tact and social intelligence than other employees on the same level in the organization. ? Sales jobs frequently require considerable travel and time away from home and family. ? Salespeople have large role sets. ? Salespeople face role ambiguity, role conflict, and role stress. ? Salespeople are knowledge brokers.

Q47. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Describe the new type of sales representative that has emerged.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. A new type of sales representative has emerged--a professional salesperson who is also a marketing consultant. This new breed works to relay consumer wants back to the firm so that appropriate products may be developed. Its representatives engage in a total consultative, non-manipulative selling; they are expected to solve customers' problems, not just take orders. The new-style reps also serve as territorial profit managers. They have the autonomy they need to make decisions that affect their own territory's profitability. Many decisions that in the past would have been made by the sales manager are today made by the salesperson. Salespeople are empowered to act in the best interests of their firms. A recent analysis of sales performance indicates that the best performing salespeople are skillful at managing complex information and implementing broader firm strategies at a micro-level (i.e., being truly customer focused in all aspects). To a large extent, technology has empowered salespeople to increase the quality of contact and service they provide to their customers by allowing them to tap into huge data banks.

Q48. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Describe the qualities to look for in a potential sales manager.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. In identifying a potential sales manager, particularly from among the ranks of salespeople, some important qualities to look for are: ? A willingness to share information. ? Structure and discipline in work habits. ? An ability to work well in teams or groups. ? Skill at selling internally. ? An ego that is not overinflated. ? Knowing how to hire and place people in the right positions.

Q49. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Application

Do you think management as a skill can be learned? Defend your answer.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. Sales management is a skill that can be learned. One of the most crucial aspects of learning how to manage is learning how to effectively allocate resources. What this means is that an effective sales manager needs to understand how to place people where they need to be. The good news is that this is an acquirable skill, however, it will require a lifelong devotion to learning and growth. The most important thing you need at this point is an open mind and a willingness to learn.

Q50. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Application

Why are you studying sales management?

Suggested answer: Sample response: Answers may vary. The primary benefit of studying sales management is related to your career aspirations. There are more positions available in sales than in any other professional occupation. As a result, there are also a lot of sales management jobs in today's world. And the pay is usually much higher in sales management jobs than in other areas of management. You may be asked to do some sales forecasting for your territory or to offer suggestions regarding a proposed compensation or quota plan. All of these activities will require knowledge of sales management. In addition, there has been a strong trend in the development of collegiate sales programs. Graduates from sales programs typically stay in their jobs longer and perform better than their counterparts. Owing to this, sales management is likely to remain a solid career path with good advancement prospects.
